

Christianity Everyday seminars are an excellent opportunity for Christians to think about the Christian worldview, apologetics and ethics. Tailored to suit your needs, with flexibility in the timing and the topics presented, the seminars can be run for individual congregations, youth groups, church camps or even a presbytery group made up of several congregations together.

Speakers are available to talk on a range of topics including:

- Christian worldview
- Marriage
- Technology & the cyber world
- Asylum seekers and refugees
- End-of-life issues
- Beginning-of-life issues
- Sexualisation
- Reconciliation in Australia
- Freedom of religion
- Science and Christianity

You can also ask us about other topics that are of interest to you.

The Committee asks congregations to make a financial contribution to help with the cost of the Christianity Everyday program. We'll work with you before your event to agree on a reasonable figure, depending on the congregation's circumstances.

Our suggested contributions are:

- For one or more people to present a series of seminars (for example, at a weekend conference or church camp), $400.
- If your event requires travel for our speakers, the Committee will work with you to reach a fair and affordable agreement about accommodation and transport costs.

Christianity Every Day seminars are coordinated by the Committee's researcher, Sheryl Sarkoezy.

Please contact her by email to plan an event for your congregation.
